Exception.

One evening the guests were all seated around the table earnestly talking on an important topic. Little Frank came running in shouting: "Papa, papa!"

"Hush, Frank, little children should be seen and not heard."

Frank subsided into silence and pensively sucked his finger. Later his father said: "Well son, what did you want to say before?"

"Just that the bathtub was overflowing."

She Obeyed Orders.

A lady had invited to dinner an old friend who had lost her nose in an accident. Taking her young daughter aside before she arrived, she cautioned her to be careful to make no remarks about Mrs. Hill's nose, as she was very sensitive about it. At the table Ethel, who had been studying the guest's face in apparent perplexity, turned inquiringly to her mother and asked: "Ma, why did you tell me to say nothing about Mrs. Hill's nose. She hasn't got any."

Fair Speed.

Wistfully he gazed out to sea, and for a long while sat motionless, watching the restless waves. Then again he turned to his fair companion, and took her hand in his.

"Molly," he pleaded, "will you marry me? Once more I ask."

But Molly shook her head, her cheeks dimpling in a fascinating smile.

"No, Jack," she said; "for the twelfth time this hour I tell you I will not."

Jack rose to his feet.
"Oh, well," he sighed, "after all, twelve knots an hour is not bad speed for a little craft like you."

CUBS' FOOD

They Thrive on Grape-Nuts.

Healthy babies don't cry and the well-nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby. Many babies who cannot take any other food relish the perfect food, Grape-Nuts, and get well.

"My baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I had fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1½ tablespoons in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed 12 teaspoonfuls of this strained Grape-Nuts juice with six teaspoonfuls of rich milk, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to baby every two hours."

"In this simple, easy way I saved baby's life and have built her up to a strong, healthy child, rosy and laughing. The food must certainly be perfect to have such a wonderful effect as this. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Sometimes it is necessary to build a long narrow house in order to make it fit the lot. You cannot hang part of your house over your neighbor's lot without making bad feelings, because neighbors are very apt to be touchy on this point. Anyway, I should rather build a 20-foot house on a 35-foot lot, and have plenty of light and air, with room on one side of the house for a good cement walk running back to the kitchen, and have room on the other side for a good lawn with a border of flowers and shrubbery.

The tendency with a great many men is to save money by buying a narrow lot. Property is sold in most places according to the frontage, and is reckoned at so much per front foot; so the width of the lot has a good deal to do with the price you have to pay. A few square feet more or less in the back, where you may raise chickens or vegetables if your taste inclines that way, cuts very little figure. The fellow who has the lot for sale just good-naturedly makes you a present of all that back-lying territory, but he charges a good round price for the street frontage.

Because of this custom in selling property, it is the fashion in some places to crowd a house 30 feet wide upon a 33-foot lot. The style of now, there was a well-founded prejudice against long narrow houses, because the heat could not be driven to the end rooms, and nobody wanted to build chimneys all in a row down through the house and set up separate stoves wherever it was found necessary. That objection, however house only 19 feet wide, yet it is well arranged, contains all the necessary conveniences, looks attractive, and is a good house generally. You get the necessary room in the length down towards the back end of the lot where land does not cost anything, for the house is 38 feet deep—just twice as long as it is wide.

CAVALRY CAPTURED A FLEET

"Horse-Marines" Figured in Incident of War for the Independence of South America.

The Llanero of South America lives on horseback; trades buys and sells on horseback; and during the war with Spain, the Llaneros contributed much toward achieving the independence of both Venezuela and New Granada. In "Up the Orinoco and Down the Magdalena," Mr. H. J. Mozans tells of an occasion when it was necessary for Bolivar's army to cross the Apure, in order to engage Merillo. But Bolivar had no boats, and the Apure at this point was wide and deep.

The Spanish flotilla was guarding the river at the point opposite to the patriot forces. Bolivar was in despair. Turning to Paez, he said, "I would give the world to have the Spanish flotilla; without it I can never cross the river."

"It shall be yours in an hour," replied Paez.

Selecting three hundred of his Llanero lancers, all distinguished for strength and bravery, he said, pointing to the gunboats, "We must have these fleshpots or die. Let those follow who please." At once spurring his horse, he dashed into the river and swam toward the flotilla. The Llaneros followed him with their lances in their hands, now encouraging their horses by swimming beside them and patting their backs, now shouting to scare away the crocodiles, of which there were hundreds in the river. At last they reached the other side, and sprang from their horses' backs on board the boats, headed by their leader. To the astonishment of every one who beheld it, they actually captured the entire flotilla—YOUTH'S Companion.
